Who wears it best — Mariah or Mariah?

With her new hit single, "Touch My Body," to promote, a sexy Mariah Carey hit Paris on March 30. During a telephone radio interview that day, Mariah hung up on a British radio host who misstated her record sales. When the host claimed the diva had sold only 80 million records worldwide, the insulted songstress said, "Is that the right quote?" and abruptly ended the call. The singer has reportedly sold closer to 160 million records. Oops!

Is all of Hollywoo hungry?

Why some of the hottest stars in the world look like they're starving themselves

They appear to have it all: money, great careers and men drooling at their feet. But Hollywood's leading ladies may be willing to risk everything they have — including their health — to become thinner. Life & Style examines the reasons why.

Is Nicole taking it too far?

Just weeks ago, Nicole Richie — who in 2006 was under a doctor's care for her eating issues — looked like the picture of post-pregnancy health. But when the new mom, 26, stepped out in LA on March 26, her appearance shocked onlookers: Her skinny jeans were loose on her! "Any woman who has struggled with weight in the past will probably revisit those thoughts after giving birth," Dr. Cheryl Dellasega, eating-disorder specialist and professor at Penn State University, tells Life & Style. And with boyfriend Joel Madden on tour overseas with his band, Good Charlotte, through mid-April, friends worry that no one is making sure Nicole eats properly on a regular basis. Says a friend, "When she goes to lunch she orders cups of black coffee but only picks at her meal."

PREGNANT IN SEPTEMBER 2007

Nicole, 5-foot-1, packed on a healthy amount of weight before the January birth of her daughter, Harlow. "Besides being responsible for myself, I'm responsible for someone else now," she said.

HEALTHY IN FEBRUARY 2008

Nicole told Life & Style that breast-feeding helped her take off the baby weight quickly.

THIN IN MARCH 2008

Now an estimated 105 pounds, Nicole (here on March 26) looks eerily like her too-skinny pre-pregnancy self.

Katie, who looks thinner than ever lately, normally orders a salad with dressing on the side when she dines out.

"I do control my eating," Victoria has admitted. She primarily sticks to vegetables, fruit and fish.

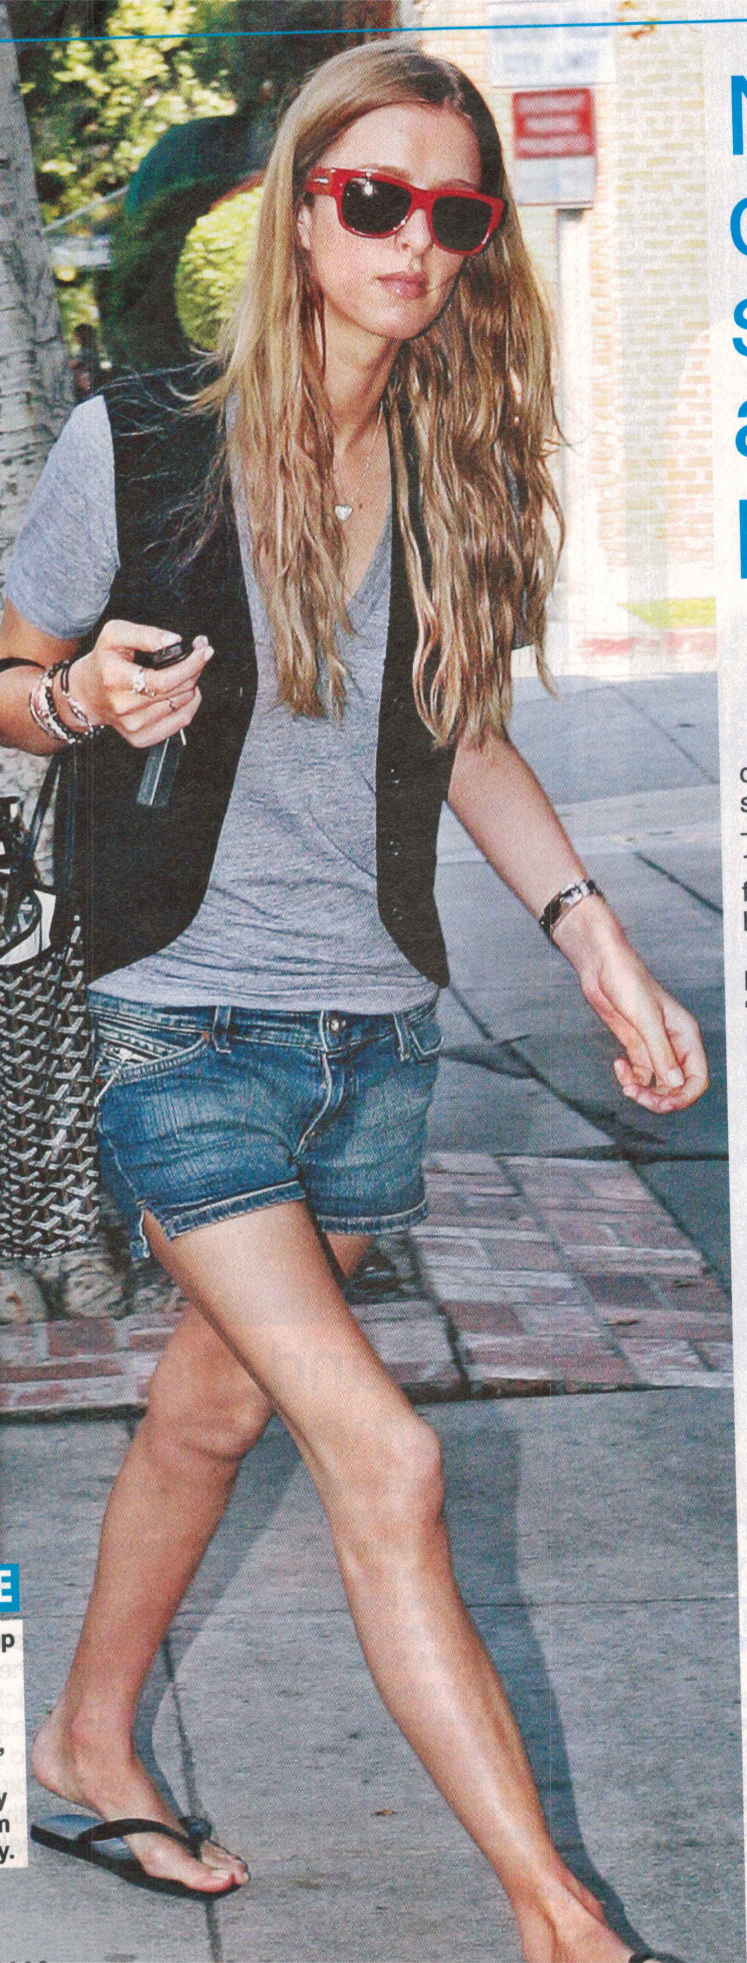
Katie and Victoria extreme diet together

Madeo Restaurant in LA is known for its decadent pastas — but during a recent dinner together, Katie Holmes, 29, and Victoria Beckham, 33, didn't indulge. In fact, the two split a meal meant for one person, sharing a green salad sans dressing, one piece of fish and one side of steamed spinach. They also ordered one regular Coke and two glasses of ice. "Katie poured half the soda into each of their glasses, then filled up the rest with bottled water," says a Madeo regular. "They do it all the time. It's how they control calories."

"Katie never worried about her weight before meeting Posh," a friend explains. "Now she wants to be just like her."

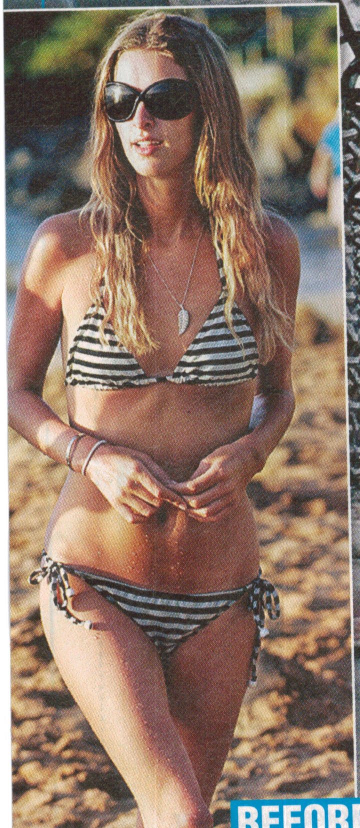
But is her stick figure the reason Katie hasn't had another child? "If a woman is too thin, it will affect her estrogen production," says Dr. Ira Sacker, author of Regaining Your Self: Breaking Free From the Eating Disorder Identity. "Weight and fertility are directly related."

Nicky denies she has an eating problem



NOW

"There's no truth to any starvation or eating-disorder rumors," Nicky says. But during a recent outing in LA, her bony frame seemed to tell a different story.



BEFORE

During a trip to Hawaii with her family in December, Nicky's bikini body looked trim but healthy.

"It's really not that interesting or true," Nicky Hilton, 24, recently stated, brushing off reports that she suffers from an eating disorder. And at her fashion show in LA on March 11, Nicky — who's carrying an estimated 110 pounds on her 5-foot-7 frame — insisted that she has a healthy diet.

"I've definitely been eating better," she told Life & Style. "I cut out soda completely and replaced it with iced tea. And I replaced white bread with wheat bread."

But is she cutting out too many calories as well? Although her rep denies Nicky has any eating issues, the socialite drank her meal while on a recent dinner date with boyfriend David Katzenberg, says an onlooker who saw the couple at the Four Seasons in LA. "She was kicking back vodka and cranberry juice," the onlooker tells Life & Style. "She had several of them. She barely touched the food on her plate."

And when David tries to talk to Nicky about her weight, a friend says, she tells him to be quiet. "He was nagging her for a while about eating more," the friend says. "Her response? She told him that she looked great."

That could be a warning sign. "Denial is a big part of having an eating disorder," says Dr. Ira Sacker. "After a while, body distortion becomes so prevalent, the person can't see what he or she really looks like."

NOW The 5-foot-9 Mariah says she doesn't have a scale but thinks she's lost about 30 pounds.

THEN Mariah's skimpy outfits haven't always flattered her body.

Mariah looks amazing — but at what cost?

Even Mariah Carey, 33, knows her food-and-exercise regimen — which includes paying for her St. Bart's–based personal trainer to travel around the world with her — is extreme. "People say, 'Only you would fly someone from St. Bart's to New York to work out,'" she acknowledged recently.

And when it comes to food, the singer is just as fanatical. "No cookies, no crackers, very little sweet stuff," she says. Instead, her diet has been composed mostly of "soups and fish prepared really blandly," she says. But the pop superstar's ultrarestrictive ways are making everyone around her insane, says a friend. "Her staff goes crazy trying to keep up with whatever new diet she's on," the friend says.

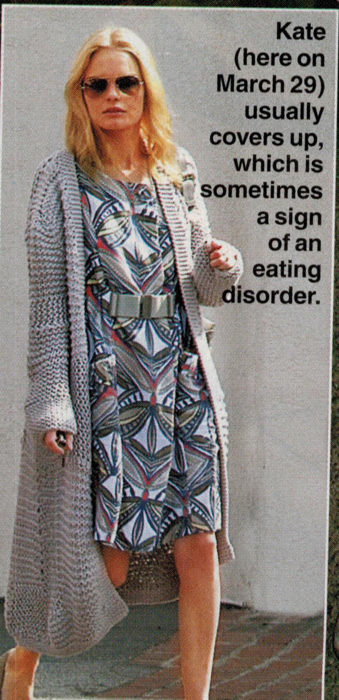
Kate hides her stick-thin frame

Kate Bosworth — who has a habit of hiding her frail form under baggy clothes — finally has admitted she was concerned for her health. "Please don't look at [my body] as the standard of some kind of beauty or health," Kate, 25, told fans in a recent interview. She also claims her body is the result of stress over an illness in her family.

When she was spotted in NYC on March 27, Kate's face looked scarily sunken-in.



Kate (here on March 29) usually covers up, which is sometimes a sign of an eating disorder.

The 21 star, here in March, recently conceded she has seen a nutritionist out of concern for her health.

Heidi vs. Lauren: It's a skinny war

Since ending their friendship in 2006, The Hills' Heidi Montag, 21, and Lauren Conrad, 22, have been fighting to one-up each other. Both have been competing in the spotlight to be the one with the skinnier body, says an insider.

Since her highly publicized plastic surgery last spring, when she had breast augmentation and a nose job, the 5-foot-4 Heidi has been looking thinner and thinner — recently dropping to an estimated 110 pounds. "She looks too skinny," says Kaitlin Kay, a trainer at Peak Performance in NYC.

Meanwhile, on March 15, the 5-foot-6 Lauren told Life & Style, "I've been putting on weight. I've been so busy that I haven't had time to work out." But at the Hills premiere in NYC on March 24, she unveiled a shockingly slender new physique — weighing in at an estimated 115 pounds. "When Heidi started getting tons of attention for her body, Lauren started stepping up her diet-and-exercise regimen," says the insider. "Now she doesn't feel insecure. She feels great."

HEIDI WEARS A SIZE 0!

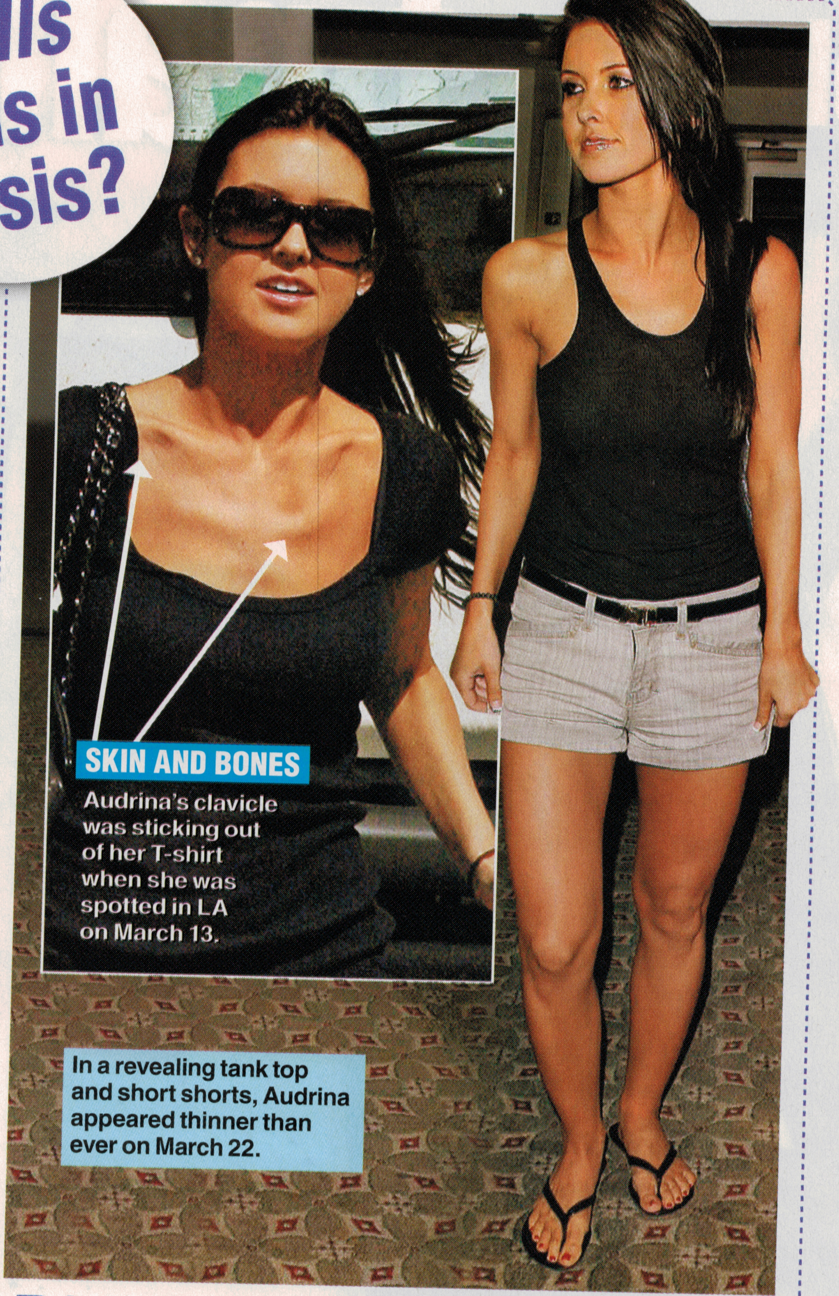
LAUREN WEARS A SIZE 2!

Lauren says cutting down on fast food and amping up her workouts helped her drop pounds.

Hills girls in crisis?



SKIN AND BONES

Audrina's clavicle was sticking out of her T-shirt when she was spotted in LA on March 13.

In a revealing tank top and short shorts, Audrina appeared thinner than ever on March 22.

Did Audrina's scandal make her lose weight?

When 4-year-old nude photos of Audrina Patridge surfaced recently, the 22-year-old Hills star was devastated. She didn't even indulge with a big group of pals during a dinner at LA hot spot STK on March 26.

"They ordered a lot of food to share," says an eyewitness, "like shrimp cocktail, filet mignon, mac and cheese and french fries. But Audrina barely ate — she just picked and nibbled."

"Stress can affect the body in two different ways," Dr. Ira Sacker, an eating-disorder specialist who doesn't work with the star, tells Life & Style. "Some people overeat — while others find it hard to eat anything at all."

The onlooker is worried: "Audrina's way too skinny. Her legs looked like twigs, even in her jeans."

Is weight loss contagious among castmates?

Is it just a coincidence that three cast members on MTV's The Hills, Heidi, Lauren and Audrina, all seem to be shrinking at the same time? Probably not. "With women, there's generally an element of competition," says Dr. Ira Sacker. "So when women are working together and spending a lot of time together, there's a good chance at least one of them will feel threatened. It can conjure up all sorts of issues, like who's thinner, who works out more — and who has the best body out of everyone."

DESPERATE HOUSEWIVES

The comic drama's leading ladies — including Eva Longoria Parker, Nicollette Sheridan and Teri Hatcher — have all gotten thinner.

Johnny's finally

The duo first met in 1993 and reconnected five years later. "Suddenly you meet your reason to live," Johnny says about his family. "They make me happy."

getting married!

Ten years and two kids later, Johnny Depp and Vanessa Paradis decide to tie the knot

Johnny Depp always seemed like the kind of Hollywood bad boy who would never settle down — until he met French model, singer and actress Vanessa Paradis nearly 10 years ago. "For all intents and purposes, we are married," Johnny, 44, has gushed. "If she ever said, 'Hey, let's get hitched,' I would do it in a second."

That time has finally come. "Vanessa recently told Johnny that she would love to have a wedding," reveals a family insider. "Johnny loves Vanessa very much, and he said if that's what would make her happy, then he'd marry her."

All the details

After months of deliberation, the couple have officially set the date for Saturday, June 14 — and they are seriously considering Tybee Island, off the coast of Georgia, as their quaint "I do" locale.

Of course, Vanessa, 35, isn't the only one who can't wait to walk down the aisle. The couple's two children, Lily-Rose, 8, and Jack, 6, "are really excited about it, too," says the family insider. "Actually the whole family is excited." In fact, the insider says, when Johnny — who was married once before, to makeup artist Lori Anne Allison from 1983 to 1985 — told his mom, Betty, "that he would do this for Vanessa and the kids, she was so happy!"

A private affair

But the quiet duo (who enjoy hiding out in rural France at their $2 million villa) are trying to keep the party small. "They're going to send out invitations in a few weeks," says the insider, noting that the list includes Johnny's mom, brother and sisters — along with his multimovie collaborator, director Tim Burton, actress Helena Bonham Carter and their son (and Johnny's godson), Billy Ray. But like the rest of their world, says the family insider, "Johnny and Vanessa want it to be intimate."

Can Johnny break his engagement streak?

His rocky romance with Kate Moss included a 1996 engagement.

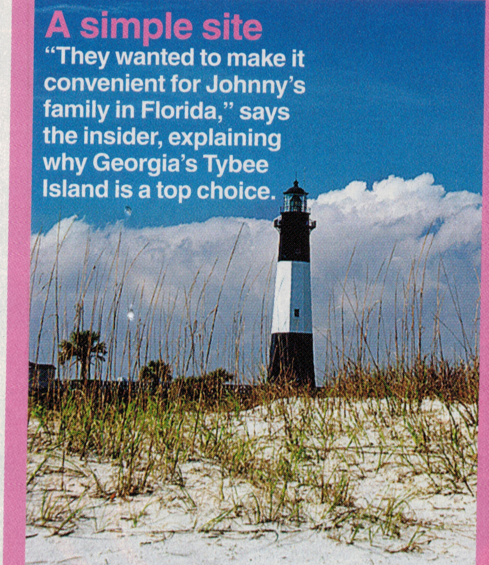
He inked Winona Ryder's name on his arm before their 1993 split.

Two months after meeting in 1988, he and Jennifer Grey got engaged.

Johnny and onetime fiancée Sherilyn Fenn broke it off in 1988.

Inside Johnny and Vanessa's big day

Between the surprise location, the luxe attire and the intimate ceremony, the soon-to-be-newlyweds are hammering out all the details for their June 14 nuptials. Says a family insider, "They've been talking about this for a couple of months now."



A simple site "They wanted to make it convenient for Johnny's family in Florida," says the insider, explaining why Georgia's Tybee Island is a top choice.

Haute couture Vanessa, who has modeled for Chanel, bought her dress in France, says the insider, while Johnny settled on a French-made suit instead of a tuxedo.

Family first "Lily-Rose and Jack will be part of the wedding party," says the insider.

Britney's kids

Kevin calls Sean (here on Feb. 11) and Jayden "little fireballs of energy," says a pal.

Jayden (here on March 13) doesn't cry as much anymore.

Why Sean Preston and Jayden James are smiling again

Britney Spears' son Jayden is one of the world's most famous toddlers, but in classes at the Encino, Calif., branch of My Gym Children's Fitness Center, he blends right in. "Jayden is adorable," says a My Gym staffer. "He gets along with all the other kids. He's really happy."

It's a dramatic turnaround for the 18-month-old, who often seemed to be in tears until recently. Since gaining sole custody of them, dad Kevin Federline seems to have given Jayden and Sean, 2½, the sense of stability they lacked when they lived with their mom. "Brit was always filling them up with fast food and didn't put them to bed on a normal schedule," says a friend of Kevin's.

"Kevin gets them to sleep every night by 8 p.m. He also makes sure they eat fruit and vegetables each day. Sean loves bananas and grapes."

Kevin's learned a lot

Of course, Kevin, 30, wasn't a natural. "Britney's parents, Jamie and Lynne, taught him about schedules, routines and general child care," says a Spears family insider. "Kevin moved the boys from bottles to sippy cups. They have regular nap schedules and consistent bath times."

Brit, 26, constantly changed their rooms or even yanked them out of bed to play at night when the kids were with her, insiders say. But no more. "Now each boy has his own room," says the family insider. "Jayden has a crib, and Sean has his big-boy bed."

Most important, Britney's behavior seems to have stabilized. She's been allowed visits — and the boys are thrilled to see her again. "Now that she's getting better, Brit really plays with them," says the family insider. Adds Kevin's friend, "The boys laugh more and they're less cranky. What a difference a little consistent TLC makes!"

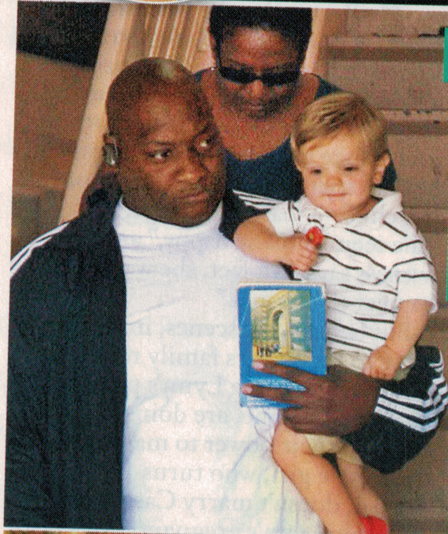
They got haircuts

"Kevin's personal barber comes over to the house to cut the kids' hair," says an insider.

BEFORE Last fall, Jayden's hair looked straggly and unkempt.

They're getting exercise



Jayden looked happy on the way out of My Gym on March 28. Both boys go to classes blending gymnastics, music, dance and sports.

BEFORE They used to get sick more — Jayden (far right) caught pinkeye, most likely from Brit's dog last fall.

They're getting their teeth fixed

The kids used to drink soda and chow on Cheetos, insiders say, but Kevin put a stop to that. And Sean Preston actually visited a dentist in Sherman Oaks, Calif., on March 18.

Jamie Lynn's parents try to stop the wedding

Jamie Lynn Spears is stunned as her parents order her not to marry Casey

THE RING!

"Her engagement ring is white gold with a small diamond," says a Spears family insider. "I don't think it cost a lot." But while Britney reportedly bought her own ring, "everyone's pretty sure Casey paid for Jamie Lynn's himself," the insider says.

Jamie Lynn Spears, whose baby is due in the spring, was all smiles as she went shopping at Babies "R" Us in Baton Rouge, La., on March 27. Sporting a T-shirt that read "The Rumors Are True" and showing off what looked like an engagement ring from her boyfriend — and the father of her child — Casey Aldridge, "she seemed really happy," an eyewitness says. "In fact, she was much happier than usual."

But behind the scenes, insiders close to the Spears family reveal to Life & Style, Jamie Lynn's parents, Jamie and Lynne, are doing everything in their power to make sure their little girl, who turns 17 on April 4, doesn't marry Casey, 18.

"Jamie Lynn's pregnant," says one insider, "but she's still a teenager. Her parents think that if she gets married, she'll just be compounding one mistake with another."

Daddy's little girl

Jamie, especially, is opposed to a wedding. "He's having a hard time pretending he can be happy about it all," says the insider. "He watched Britney go through a messy divorce after rushing into marriage and having kids too young. It's caused the family nothing but grief."

Of course, since she's not 18 yet, Jamie Lynn can't get married without her parents' consent. "And Jamie isn't about to give his permission any time soon," says the insider. Lynne's another story. "She can be a real pushover when it comes to her kids," the insider says. "So even though Lynne doesn't think marriage is the right move, Jamie Lynn could potentially persuade her mom to back her up."

Fighting for Casey

And Jamie Lynn just might try to sway her mother's mind. "Jamie Lynn thinks it's ridiculous that she and Casey are going to have a baby together but will have to live in separate houses," says a second Spears family insider. "She's extremely frustrated and won't stop fighting her parents on it until they give in."

Indeed, Jamie Lynn is a determined young lady. "She brings up marrying Casey every day," says the second insider. "I don't even know if she's really sure she wants to marry him. But she does like to get her way."

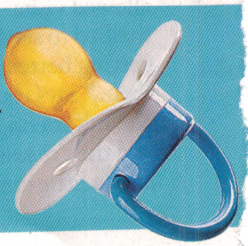
Is it a boy?

Jamie Lynn's been dropping big clues as to whether she's having a boy or a girl. "She refers to her baby as a he," says a Spears family insider. "She was talking to neighbors about how hungry she's been lately, and she said, 'He's a big eater. He keeps me hungry all the time.'" Hmm…



FINAL DECISION

"Neither Jamie nor Lynne is taking this relationship too seriously," says a Spears family insider. "There won't be a wedding as long as Jamie's in charge."

STANDING UNITED

"Jamie Lynn's fed up with the fact that her parents won't let her marry Casey," says a Spears family insider.

Angelina certainly wasn't wearing a wedding band as she and Brad took a stroll in Austin, Texas, on March 31.

THE TRUTH ABOUT BRAD AND ANGELINA'S WEDDING

Hold the rice! Contrary to online reports, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie did not tie the knot at a New Orleans wedding chapel. "Brad and Angelina did not get married by us," the Rev. Tony Talavera, the minister and owner of the French Quarter Wedding Chapel (the reported wedding site) tells Life & Style. "I have not met them."

Brad, 44, and Angelina, 32, are currently living in Austin, Texas, where Brad is filming Tree of Life. But the couple own a home in the Big Easy, so when a private wedding reception blocked off part of the French Quarter on March 29, the buzz began that the couple had finally and legally become the Jolie-Pitts.

Which begs the question: If they ever do decide to get married, where would their real wedding take place? France seems to be the leading contender. "They're planning to go there on May 20," an insider close to the couple reveals to Life & Style. "They've been looking at châteaus where they'll stay until Angie gives birth. It's really important for her to have the baby in France because her mother, Marcheline Bertrand, was of French descent. It would be a wonderful tribute to Angelina's mom."

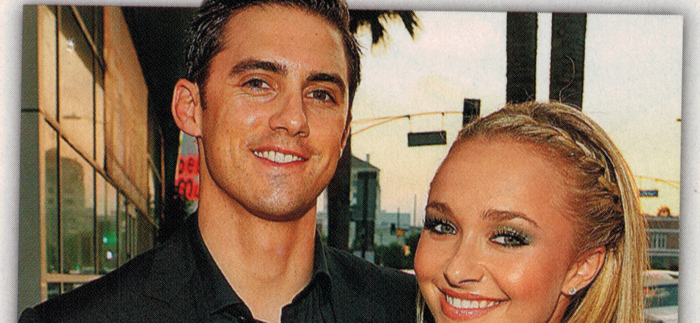
If that doesn't work out, the Rev. Talavera would be happy to hitch the high-wattage Hollywood couple himself. "We extend the invitation," he says. "We're glad they're neighbors."

"This just got out of control," the Rev. Talavera of the French Quarter Wedding Chapel tells Life & Style.

Does Heath have a love child?

The controversy surrounding Heath Ledger's death continues. Heath's uncle Haydn spoke of a rumor that the late actor — who died of an accidental drug overdose at the age of 28 in January — may have fathered a child when he was 17. An insider close to actress Michelle Williams, the mother of Heath's 3-year-old daughter, Matilda, says, "Michelle feels that if Heath did have another child in the world, he'd have done anything he could have for her. She isn't paying it much attention." There's also a brouhaha over the uncertainty surrounding Heath's will, which was written before Matilda's birth and left his entire estate (initially totaling $145,000 but now said to be in the millions) to his parents and three sisters.

According to an uncle, Heath fathered a baby girl with a 25-year-old woman when he was a teenager.



Milo and Hayden didn't grant any interviews at the event.

Milo and Hayden lie low

Milo Ventimiglia, 30, and Hayden Panettiere, 18, are still going to great lengths to hide their love. At the Humane Society's Genesis Awards in Beverly Hills on March 29, the Heroes couple skipped the red carpet and dinner, sneaking into the ceremony when the lights were down. And when the show ended, the pair quickly split. Says an insider, "They were rushed out the back entrance by her publicist."

Rumer's new hottie!

Bruce Willis and Demi Moore's eldest daughter, Rumer, is crushing hard on Dirt cutie Ryan Eggold. "They went out for the first time a few weeks ago," says a friend of Rumer's. "They've been keeping it quiet, but he's definitely on her radar." What's the perfect date night for Rumer, 19, and Ryan, 23 (who used to date Dirt co-star Alexandra Breckenridge, according to the friend)? "They usually hang out at each other's houses," says the friend.

J.LO GETS HER HAIR DONE — TO HER OWN MUSIC!

New mom Jennifer Lopez hit NYC's Rita Hazan Salon on March 28 for a haircut and color. But the salon wasn't exactly playing her kind of music when she arrived. "Britney Spears was pumping," says a witness. "Someone quickly put on Jen's songs. They have a special J.Lo mix she gave them to put on when she's there!"

The salon also made sure Jennifer, who gave birth to twins Max and Emme on Feb. 22 via Caesarean section, had plenty of reading material. "She likes to have one of every new magazine available," says the eyewitness.

Yep, J.Lo, 38, was in full diva mode, even raving about a diamond ring her husband, Marc Anthony, had just bought her, says an insider. (A push present, perhaps?) "She needed to recharge," says a friend of the singer. "It's difficult to feel beautiful when you're constantly changing double diapers."

Jennifer spent more than three hours in the salon. "She was eager to get home," Rita Hazan tells Life & Style. "It was just about the longest she'd been away from the babies. And she looked amazing. She just had twins — and looks so thin!"

"They are the most beautiful things in the whole world," J.Lo (here leaving the salon) gushed about her twins while getting her hair done, says a witness.

New concern for Heather and Richie's daughter?

A friend is worried about Ava Sambora, the 10-year-old daughter of actress Heather Locklear and Bon Jovi guitarist Richie Sambora — and with good reason. Heather, 46, recently got a visit from paramedics responding to a 911 call saying the star was suicidal. Then on March 25, with Ava in the car, Richie, 48, was arrested on suspicion of DUI. "It must have hurt Ava to see her dad put into a police car," says the friend of the ex-couple, who split in 2006. "Her mom and dad are all Ava has. We're concerned about her and hope Heather and Richie will do everything they can to make Ava feel safe from now on."

MUG SHOT!

Ava (Heather and Richie's only child) "is a sensitive soul," says a friend of the ex-couple. "She's having a rough time right now."

Ashley's music doesn't stink

Ashley Tisdale is the new face — and voice — of Degree Girl. "I've recorded some songs for them," Ashley, 22, tells Life & Style. "You'll be able to download them on degreegirl.com." The deodorant campaign also aims to have fans share their sweat-inducing OMG moments (the best entry wins a trip to LA for a concert with Ashley). "Mine was hanging out with Jessica Simpson a few years ago," says Ashley. "I was so excited to meet her!"

"People sweat," Ashley tells Life & Style. "No one's perfect."

"Lindsay knew all the moves," says a partygoer.

Lindsay does the moonwalk

Lindsay Lohan's a fan of the Gloved One? Who knew! While partying at hot spot Teddy's in LA on March 29, the actress, 21, hit the dance floor just as her gal pal, DJ Samantha Ronson, began spinning Michael Jackson's "Beat It." "Lindsay was moonwalking and grabbing her crotch," says an eyewitness. "She was great!" For an encore, Lindsay channeled Olivia Newton-John and got down to Grease's "You're the One That I Want."

"John was basically ignoring everyone else that night, even his girlfriend at the time, Jessica Simpson," Perez tells Life & Style about his wild night with the singer on Dec. 31, 2006.

IN HIS OWN WORDS

PEREZ HILTON: I MADE OUT WITH JOHN MAYER

Celebrity blogger Perez Hilton confesses to Life & Style about a surprisingly intimate moment — with crooner John Mayer.

"I hooked up with John Mayer!" he says. "And it was pretty good! We hooked up at [NYC club] Stereo for like five minutes. It was New Year's Eve 2006, and everyone was pretty drunk. He just grabbed my face and shoved his tongue down my throat! It went on forever! I'm pretty sure that wasn't his first time kissing a guy because he seemed like a pro! And I don't know many straight dudes who would make out with another dude for five minutes with tongue, be that good at it and seem to enjoy it!

"We had met up with each other earlier in the night, and he kept whispering in my ear. He even sang his song 'Gravity' to me! John Mayer sang to me! Then he was pouring drinks, whiskey I think, down my throat!

"I've kept it a secret for John's sake, but lately John's been blogging about me in a not-so-flattering way. He says I'm struggling with my homosexuality? But he's the person who seems to be struggling with his sexuality. I know I'm gay!"

"This is all just ridiculous," John's reps say. But Perez stands by his story, stating, "I would be willing to take a lie-detector test!"

The dirt on Courteney and Coco's late-night dinner

Courteney Cox sure puts her nanny to good use. When the 43-year-old Dirt star wasn't ready to call it a night after taking her daughter, Coco, 3, to dinner with friends at Jar in LA on March 26, she summoned her sitter.

"The nanny came into the restaurant around 10 p.m. and snuck Coco out the back door so she could get to bed at a decent hour," Shannon Jones, a fellow diner, tells Life & Style. "Then Courteney had the chance to unwind with her girlfriends until around 10:30 p.m. They were drinking red wine and talking about how much fun Courteney's having shooting the movie Bedtime Stories with Adam Sandler."

"Coco was adorable and well-behaved," says an eyewitness.

Hulk's new love looks like his daughter!

Onlookers did a double take when Hulk Hogan, 54, showed up at the Langham Huntington Hotel and Spa in Pasadena, Calif., on March 27 with his new girlfriend, Jennifer McDaniel. "I thought he was with his daughter, Brooke," says an insider. "When they started kissing, I began to get nauseated! But then I heard him call her Jennifer." As Life & Style previously reported, the pro wrestler and reality-TV star is in the midst of getting a divorce from Linda, his wife of almost 25 years.

Hulk and the 30-something Jennifer were also at LA's Foxtail on March 27.

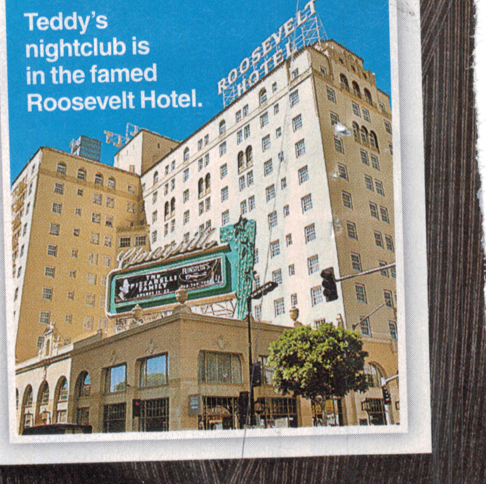
"I'm boy crazy," Cameron says in the May issue of British GQ. Look out, Gerard!

CAMERON AND GERARD'S HOT HOOKUP!

Not even Cameron Diaz can resist a man with an accent! The 35-year-old actress, who was last linked to Criss Angel and John Mayer, got up close and personal with Gerard Butler, the Scottish-born star of 300, at Teddy's nightclub in LA on March 29. "They ignored everyone else," says an onlooker. "They just kept getting closer and closer."

Gerard, 38, couldn't get enough of Cam. "There was a lot of thigh and arm touching," says the onlooker, "which got more progressive as the night went on." Between sips of champagne and water, Cameron seemed to be laughing at all of Gerard's jokes. "At one point," the onlooker adds, "she placed her bottle of Voss water between her legs, and Gerard put his hand on it."

But just as the couple (who also reportedly had dinner together at the Chateau Marmont in LA on March 27) were about to lock lips, a group of tipsy girls interrupted them and asked for a photo. "Gerard was annoyed at first," says the insider, "but then was amused to discover the girls had no idea who he was. They just wanted him to take a picture of them, which he did!" And then, of course, he got back to canoodling with Cameron.



Teddy's nightclub is in the famed Roosevelt Hotel.

Kirsten's life — and apartment (below) — have gotten an overhaul. "She's taking things one day at a time," says an insider.

Kirsten's new hideaway

Kirsten Dunst, 25, is getting a fresh start in NYC, where she's renovating a new $3 million penthouse apartment, says an insider. The three-bedroom, two-bath loft on Canal Street has 12-foot ceilings and Hudson River views. "The place will be stunning," says a second insider. "There's so much room to roam."

And the Spider-Man star plans to stick close to her new home. "For now, she's trying to stay away from LA, where she hit rock bottom," says a third insider. "Before rehab, she was really hitting all the bars." Kirsten, says the third insider, checked out of Utah's Cirque Lodge in March after a six-week stay and is establishing a more sober life. "Getting treatment," says the third insider, "has given her a new lease on life."

TENSE TIMES FOR NICK AND VANESSA

There's trouble in paradise for Nick Lachey and Vanessa Minnillo, who stepped out for a late dinner at LA's Katsuya on March 25. "They seemed happy at first," Katsuya regular Robyn Baritz tells Life & Style. "But then something went wrong."

Vanessa, says Baritz, looked to have said something that offended Nick. "He suddenly pulled away from her and looked very distant after that," says Baritz. Though the spat didn't affect their appetites — Vanessa had baked cod, Nick opted for the Kobe beef — the couple were cool to each other. "It was obvious Nick was upset," says Baritz. "Vanessa tried to make up, but Nick didn't want any part of it."

Nick, 34, and Vanessa, 27, weren't in sync when they left, either. "Usually Nick's very protective of her, leading her by the hand, but he walked way ahead," says a second eyewitness.

So what gives? "They have their ups and downs," says an insider close to the couple. "Everyone thought an engagement was near. Now, not so much. They're still a couple, but they've got to work out some things."

Could Kate push Owen over the edge?

Owen Wilson's thrilled to be back with Kate Hudson, but friends worry what will happen if their relationship ends again

Owen Wilson looked like he had put his problems behind him when he went for a romantic dinner with Kate Hudson at Michael's Genuine Food & Drink in Miami on March 17. "They came in around 7:30 p.m. and sat at a private table right under the stairs," says an eyewitness. "They shared a pizza, fries and some oysters, and Owen later ordered a steak. They sat holding hands and calling each other baby. They were all smiles and acting very much in love."

But while Owen, 39, may be happy that his romance with Kate, 28, is back on, his friends and family have serious concerns. After all, the last time Kate broke things off — in June 2007 — it triggered a downward spiral for Owen, who attempted suicide just two months later. "It's no secret that Owen was really torn up when they split the first time," says a Wilson family insider.

This time, insiders fear, the actor — who has struggled with depression and done stints in rehab in the past — may be even more fragile. His new movie, Drillbit Taylor, grossed just $10 million in its opening weekend. And he's away from his support system (his brothers Andrew and Luke and best friend Woody Harrelson are all based in LA) while he's in Miami shooting the comedy Marley & Me with Jennifer Aniston. As a result, "Owen is really relying on Kate right now for his well-being and stability," says an Owen insider. "It's a really risky situation for him to have put himself in. If she leaves him, it'll destroy Owen."

Insiders are right to worry, says psychologist Jeff Gardere, who has not treated the couple. "Owen's getting back together with Kate could be the trigger, once again, for him to become suicidal," he says. "It's playing with dynamite."

An unequal relationship

To add to the danger, insiders say Owen's head over heels for Kate — "His face just glows when he talks about her," says the family insider — but she doesn't seem to feel the same. "Owen is definitely in love with her — in his mind there's no other girl for him," confirms the Owen insider. "But Kate still has her doubts, and she's not convinced that he's a stable father figure for [Kate's young son] Ryder."

The insider says Owen's mom, Laura, in particular, has expressed deep misgivings about the couple's reunion.

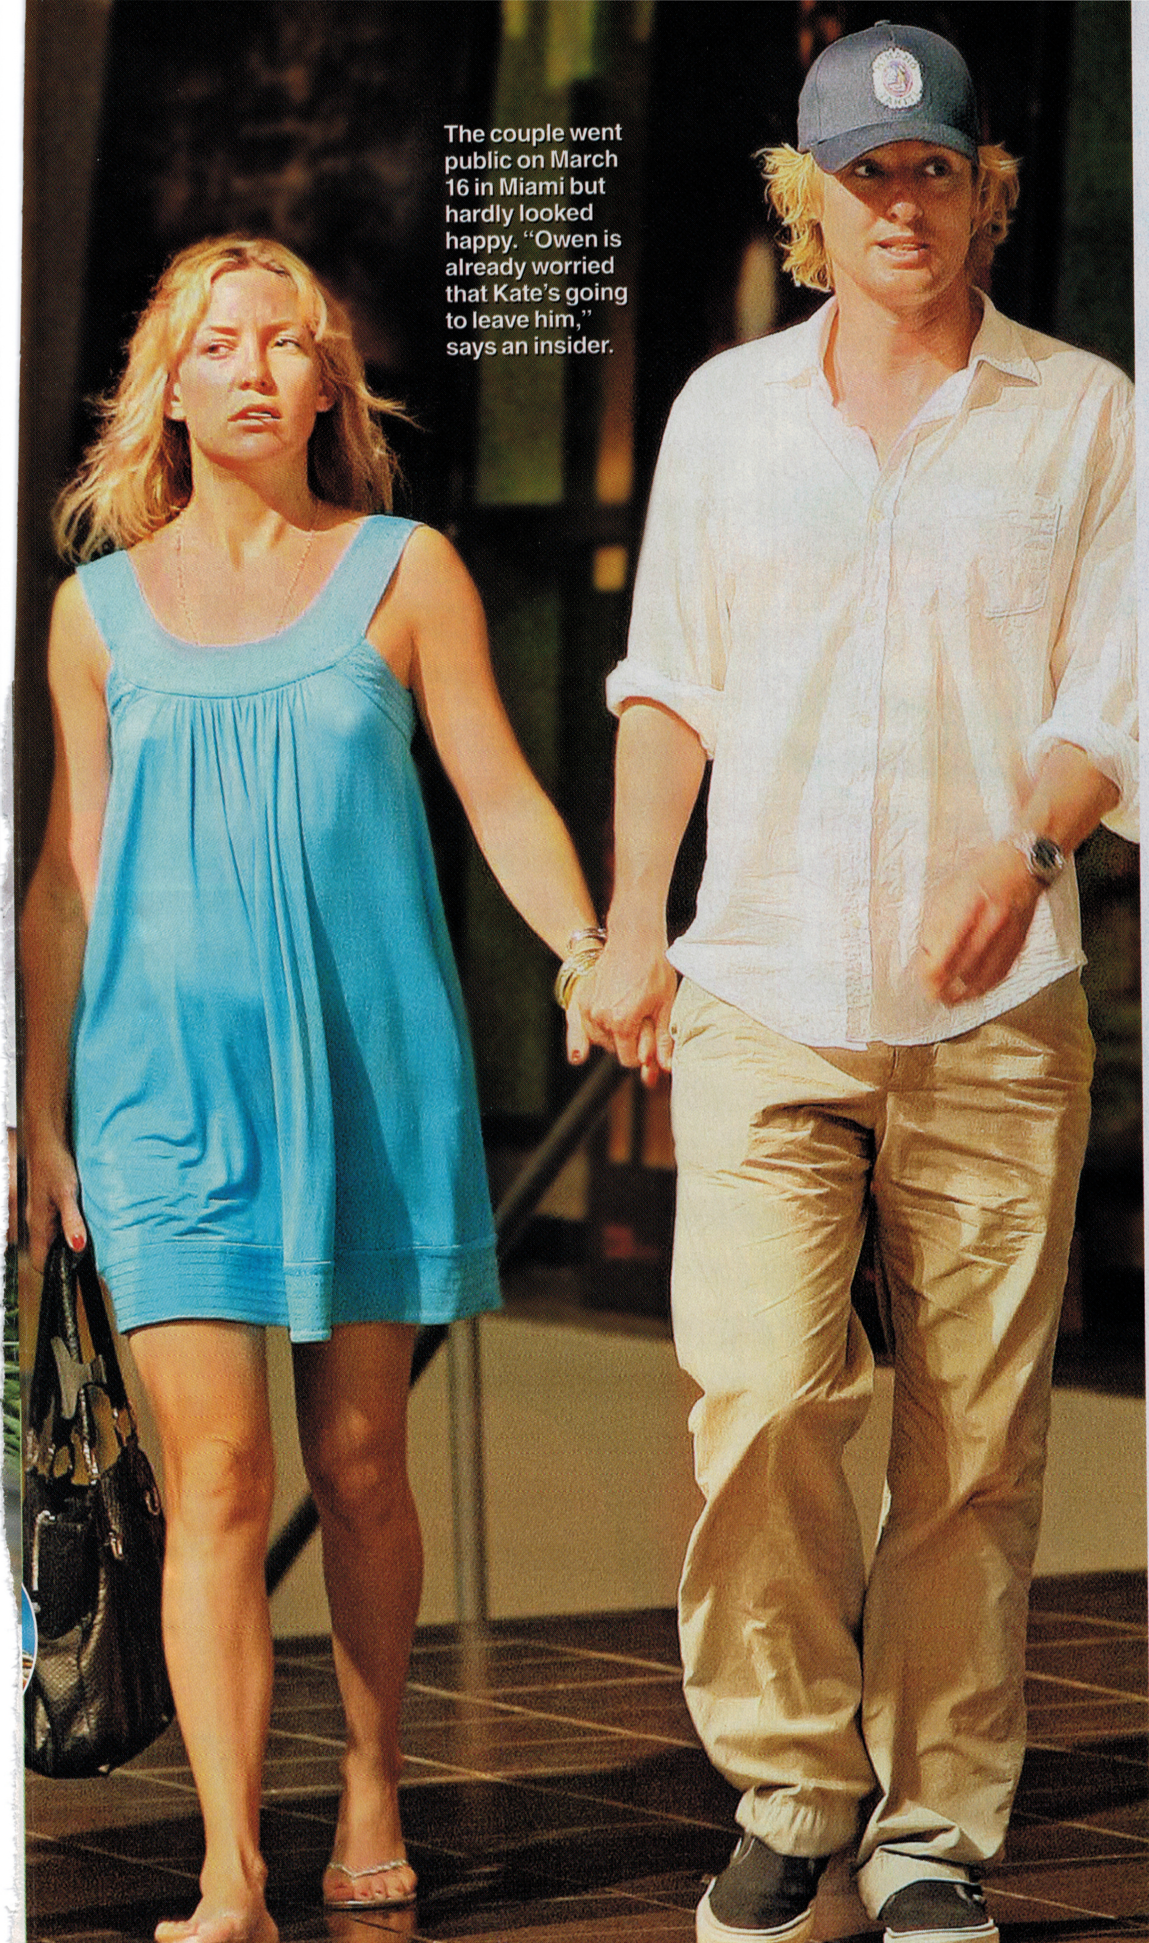
"It's not that she doesn't like Kate," the insider says. "It's more that she's afraid of what might happen to her son if things don't work out. So she's torn — it's great to see Owen happy, but she doesn't want him to get hurt. She's just being protective."

It all fell apart the first time

Kate and Owen seemed like a perfect match, but his problems with drugs and alcohol pushed her away, insiders say. The couple split in June 2007, and weeks after photos emerged of Kate kissing then-beau Dax Shepard, Owen slashed his wrists.

The couple met while shooting the 2006 comedy You, Me and Dupree.

Three weeks after his Aug. 26 suicide attempt, Owen was healing, but scars were visible.



The couple went public on March 16 in Miami but hardly looked happy. "Owen is already worried that Kate's going to leave him," says an insider.

Kate's still into seeing other guys

She hooked up with Justin

In February, Kate and Justin Timberlake lunched at a Whole Foods Market in NYC, as Life & Style reported. Though a rep for JT denies it, a friend of Kate's claims the actress was involved with Justin but called it off to avoid hurting his ex — and her friend — Cameron Diaz. "Kate didn't want to rub it in Cam's face," the pal says. "But she did brag that she and Justin had gotten cozy recently. She thinks he's hot!"

She still loves Chris

Since separating in 2006, Kate and ex-hubby Chris Robinson have remained close for the sake of their son, 4-year-old Ryder. But how close? They still get together occasionally, says a Kate insider. "Whatever man I end up with, I will always love Chris," Kate sa in April's Elle UK. "It's abou being a family forever."

Ashlee Simpson:

Ashlee, 23, has been dating Fall Out Boy bassist Pete Wentz, 28, for more than a year.

Ashlee's a rocker chick

As a kid, Ashlee listened to Madonna and Pat Benatar. "My mom would do aerobics to their songs," she says. But the first album Ashlee bought was Alanis Morissette's Jagged Little Pill.

I'm a good little girlfriend

The singer dishes on life with her rock-star boyfriend

Ashlee Simpson's upcoming album is called Bittersweet World, but there isn't much for the singer to be bitter about! With her third CD debuting on April 22, a hot boyfriend, Fall Out Boy's Pete Wentz, and a new T-shirt line, it's pretty sweet to be Ashlee — and she knows it!

How do you stay grounded?

I have an awesome boyfriend and great friends and family. I just go about my business.

You and Pete are both musicians. How's that?

We try to keep our work separate, but he'll listen to my music and say, "Oh, baby — I really like that song." He's very positive and supportive.

Does he ever say, "Baby, I don't like that song?"

Oh yeah. He's very honest with me, so I always want his true opinion.

Are you domestic?

I do cook. Nothing too big, but I definitely try to cook for Pete. And I'm into cleaning up and being the good little girlfriend.

Does he cook, too?

He leaves that to me.

What do you and Pete like doing together?

We spend a lot of our time together. We do a lot of everything.

Is it hard when you're both on the road?

I went on the road with him, and he just recently went on the road with me, so we keep a nice balance. I'm pretty good at going on the road with him.

How do you stay in such great shape?

I have a good metabolism. I eat fries and pizza but in moderation. If I don't let myself have something, I'll just think about it. As for exercise, during shows I dance around the whole time and sweat like crazy. At home, I do the elliptical or treadmill twice a week for 20 minutes.

Are you a girlie girl?

I'm a tomboyish girlie girl — 50-50 pretty much.

You said you thought you'd never be the beautiful girl on a magazine cover. Now you are!

I never thought my life would end up taking the turn that it has. I always saw myself with blue hair in a band. So it's great to be in the place that I am right now. Either way, I'd be happy. I'll probably still have blue hair one day!

Ashlee's new career

Not only is Ashlee Simpson a singer and actress, now's she a designer, too. The star created a collection of nine shirts set to hit Wet Seal stores on April 22.

Her hair wasn't the only thing different about Ashlee in 2005!

Her face looks softer with her revamped nose.

I would get more surgery

In 2006. Ashlee traded in her nose for a more refined version — and she's happy with the results. Could there be another nip-tuck in her future? "Never say never!" Ashlee says. In fact, she'd recommend going under the knife to other young women if it were for the right reasons. "It's not for everyone," she says.

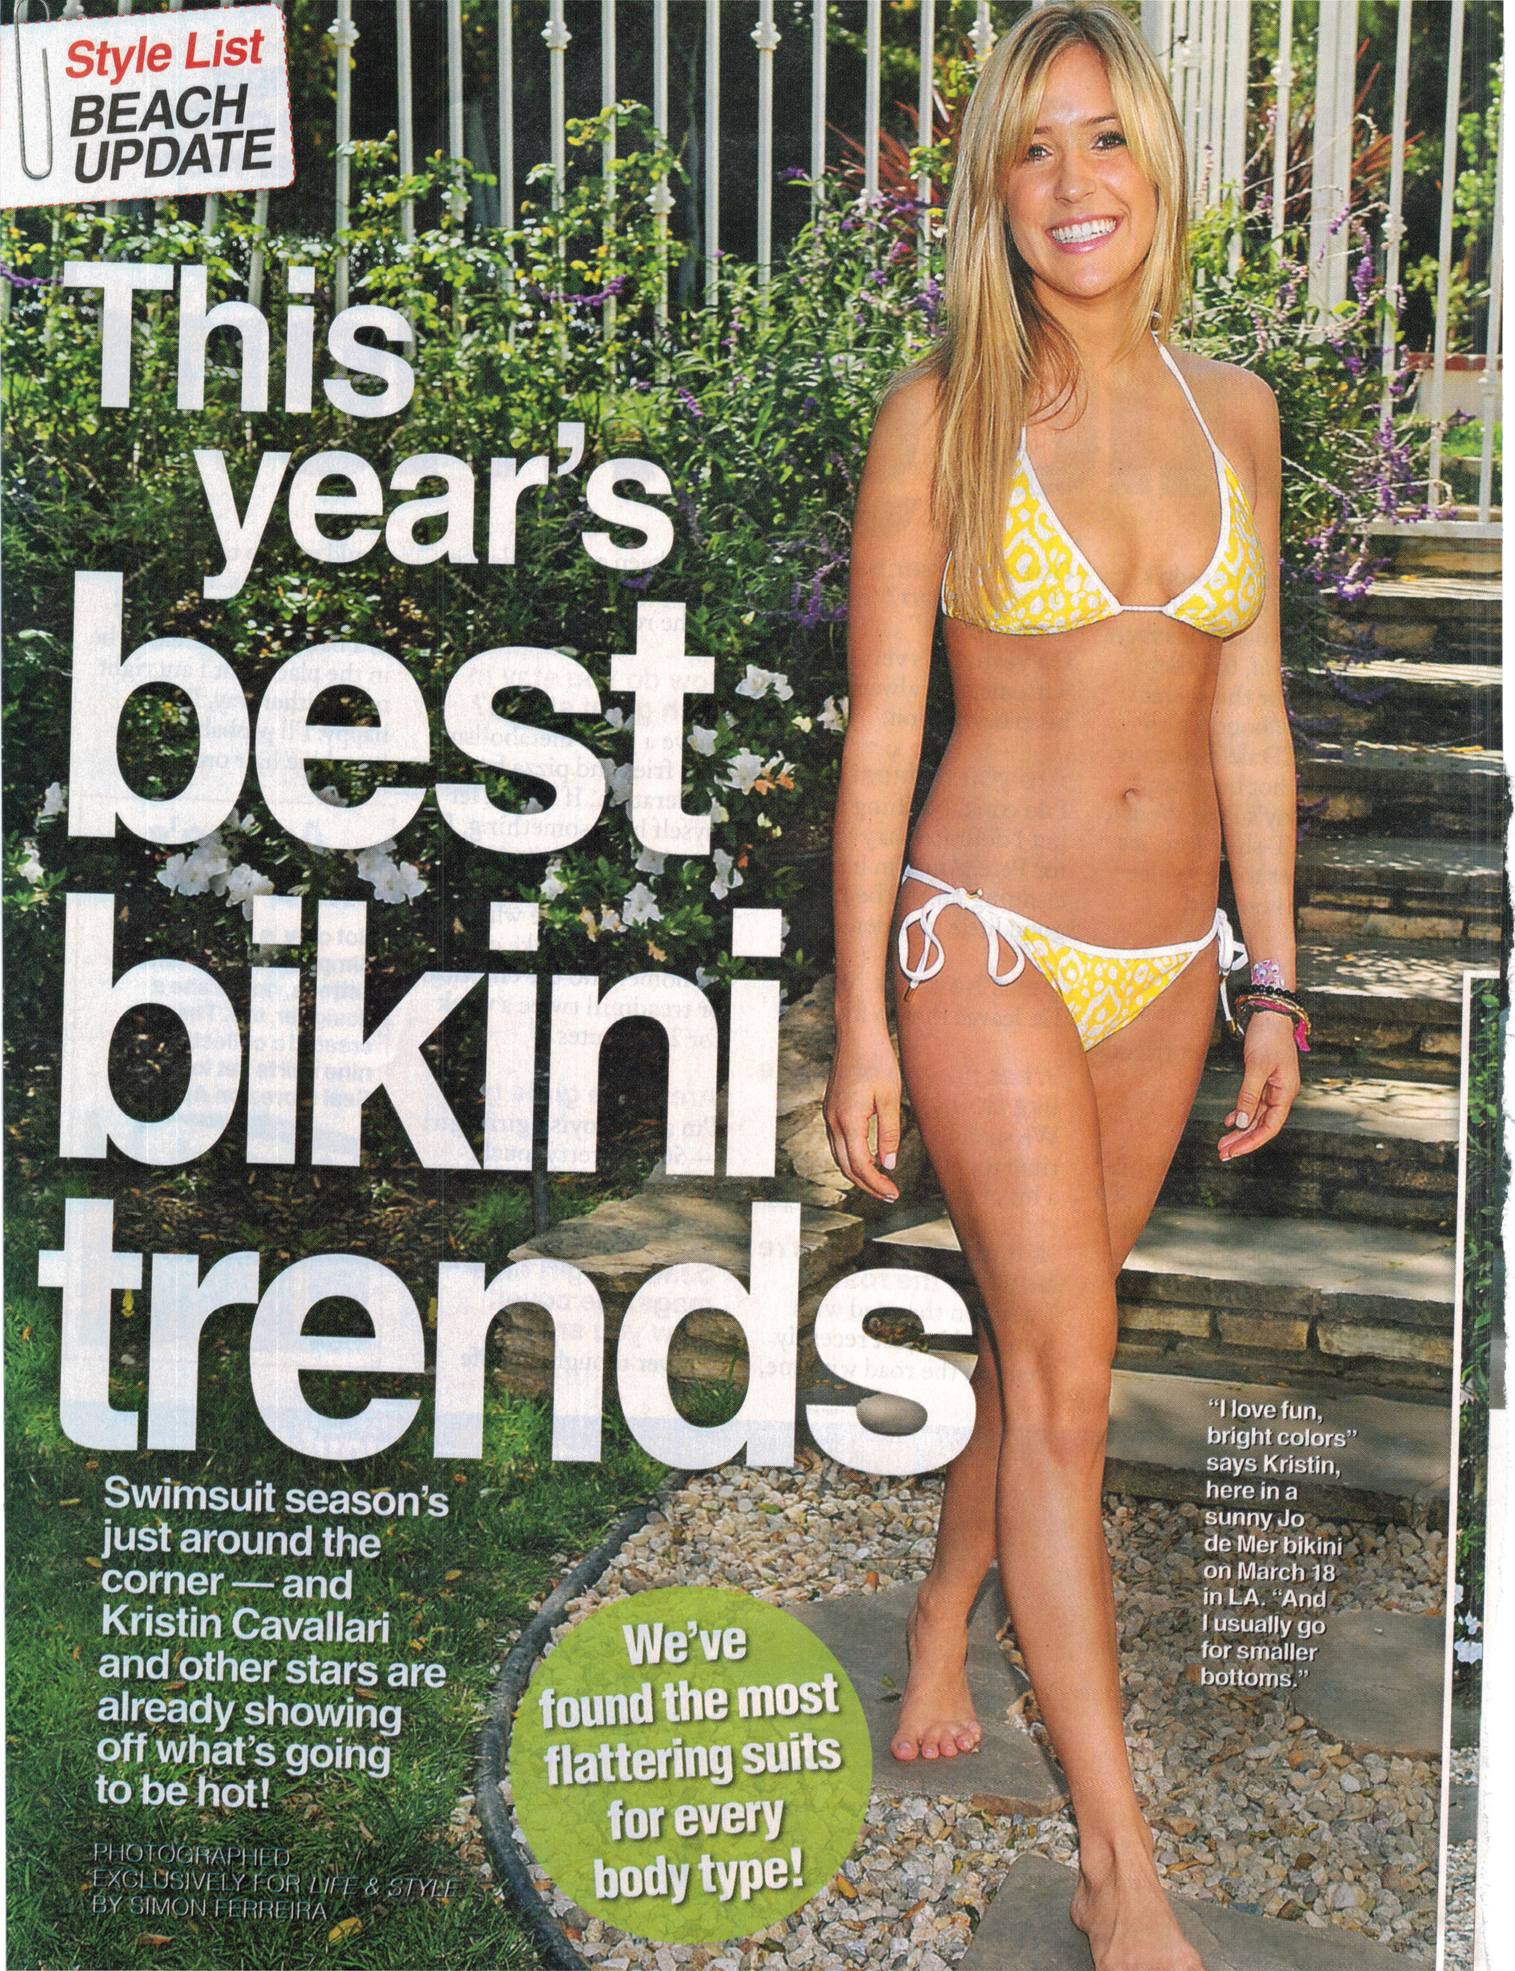
BEACH UPDATE

This year's best bikini trends

Swimsuit season's just around the corner — and Kristin Cavallari and other stars are already showing off what's going to be hot!



"I love fun, bright colors" says Kristin, here in a sunny Jo de Mer bikini on March 18 in L.A. "And I usually go for smaller bottoms."

We've found the most flattering suits for every body type!

PHOTOGRAPHED EXCLUSIVELY FOR LIFE & STYLE BY SIMON FERREIRA

Orange County girl Kristin Cavallari lives the California beach life, so it's no surprise that she's already flaunting one of this season's hottest bathing suit styles: a bright-yellow two-piece.

"My favorite bathing suit is a string bikini because it flatters me the most," Kristin tells Life & Style. "But at the beach, I like to wear a summer dress over my bikini."

And Kristin's been sweating hard getting ready for swimsuit season — she's been working out with a trainer three to four times a week.

That sort of commitment to exercise still leaves Kristin plenty of time to devote to her career (she recently filmed a Gavin DeGraw music video) and to the single life. This summer, Kristin says, "I hope to be working hard and playing harder." And she'll be looking stylish while doing it!

Despite rocking a Jo de Mer two-piece, Kristin admits she tends to gain weight around her middle.

She's accustomed to taking center stage, but former MISS USA TARA CONNER tells Life & Style she feels most comfortable in a suit "that covers up the goodies." Tara, here on March 18 in a Jo de Mer two-piece, says, "It needs to be super comfortable, and I need to feel confident walking around in it." Of course, working out and eating healthily (except for occasional McDonald's and Del Taco splurges) help her chances of wowing on the beach.

Spice Girl and Dancing With the Stars alum MELANIE BROWN knows what works for her body. "I had a woman make me a line of bikinis by hand when I was in Brazil," Mel B, here wearing one of the suits in Miami on March 15, tells Life & Style. "They hold my bum and boobs up." Of course, boot camp training and sugar-free Jell-O treats also help the singer and new mom defy gravity.

When it comes to swimwear, LISA RINNA doesn't have many restrictions, she tells Life & Style. "It just really has to flatter my body type and look good with my skin tone," she says. The Ed Hardy monokini she sported on March 17 did just that with the perk of being "fun and different," says Lisa. It's the perfect piece for her to wear this summer at her lakeside place in Canada!

For trainer Bob Harper, losing excuses is the real secret to losing weight

Bob Harper, the Blue Team trainer on NBC's The Biggest Loser, has heard every excuse in the book for gaining weight. But in his book, Are You Ready! Take Charge, Lose Weight, Get in Shape, and Change Your Life Forever, Harper reveals the reason most diets fail has nothing to do with eating and exercising habits.

"It's about emotional roadblocks," Harper tells Life & Style. "It's having a self-defeating attitude and saying, 'I can't do it. I'll never be able to change.'" Even celeb clients, like Gwyneth Paltrow, have needed a kick in the butt sometimes to keep their hot bods, he adds.

Attitude adjustment

Harper explains how to take control of the emotional and mental aspects of fitness. The first step? "Embrace what you see in the mirror," he says. "You want a healthy, realistic relationship with your body." And bad habits must go. "The old routine is why you're out of shape and unhealthy," he says. After taming those diet demons, the rest falls into place, he explains.

A worry-free solution

Of course, to complement a positive attitude, Harper recommends eating well: 300-calorie minimeals (about five in all) every four hours. His plan does not officially define breakfast, lunch or dinner — but each meal should contain an energy-boosting, filling protein (which takes time to digest). "If you want to eat turkey on whole wheat at 6 a.m.," he declares, "do it!"

Harper also offers suggestions for varying the 300 calories. One of his breakfast recommendations is a cup of instant oatmeal, three egg whites and a whole egg scrambled together and a sliced apple. Lunch could be a turkey burger on a whole-wheat bun with low-fat cheese, and dinner could be a 4-ounce beef fillet with a side of sweet potatoes and a salad. At snack time, maybe spread a tablespoon of peanut butter on some apple slices, or eat a cup of cottage cheese with eight to 10 cherry tomatoes or a cup of nonfat yogurt mixed with a cup of berries.

Take it step by step

But if a diet overhaul just seems too daunting, Harper advises simply reducing portion sizes at each meal. "Eat only half of that fattening food," he says. "Seeing the scale go down will provide the necessary motivation."

Plus, it will be the starting point for a lifestyle commitment. "The idea isn't to get a six-pack in six weeks," explains Harper. "It's what you can do, day to day, for the rest of your life."

GWYNETH KNOWS SELF-CONTROL!

Bob Harper has helped GWYNETH PALTROW, 35, get in shape. Maybe that's how the organic-food lover learned her healthy habits!

Bob's mind-body rules to live by

1 DON'T FILL UP ON DRINKS

"A venti Caramel Macchiato contains half your calories for the day," says Harper. "And when you drink rather than eat something, you're not getting the same satisfaction."

2 TAKE TIME TO RELAX

"There's nothing like stress to send you running to the fridge," he says. "Ask yourself what helps you to relax, then do it."

3 CALL ON FRIENDS

"Join a support group or get a workout partner who wants to lose weight," he says. Either will help maintain willpower!

4 DON'T FEEL GUILTY

"A chocolate bar is just a chocolate bar; eating it doesn't make you a bad person," Harper says. "Think about why you ate it, then get back on the horse."

5 MOVE IT!

"A workout doesn't mean just going to the gym," he says. "Climb the stairs."

6 FOCUS ON FOOD

"Never eat in front of the TV," he says. "You lose awareness of how much you've actually consumed."

7 KNOW YOUR BEST

YOUR FACE HERE

Forget outside inspiration: "Pin up a photo of you at your sexiest and skinniest as a reminder of what needs to be done."

8 KEEP THE MOUTH MOVING

Chew gum or drink water when the urge to eat hits but the body isn't really hungry.

9 EAT EARLY

Harper says to eat within the first 30 minutes of waking up to rev a sluggish metabolism.

10 START SMALL

"Don't change everything at once," says Harper, who suggests setting attainable goals. "Rome wasn't built in a day."

EXPERT Q&A

Oprah's fave shares

Q: I have lots of family photos displayed in my living room, but the frames are mix-and-match. Should I put all the pictures in similar frames so they look neater?

A: Photos add a special touch to a home, and the frames you choose don't have to match perfectly, but they should look cohesive as a group. For instance, they could all be in the same color family or the same shape or material, like the capiz-shell ones here. Since photo collections grow over the years, it's smart to gather the pictures you have lying around and pare down by picking your favorites.

Enhance a room's lighting with candles like Heroes star Ali Larter did.

Q: I'm looking for a new chandelier for my living room. Any suggestions on where I can find something unique? And will just one fixture give off enough light?

A: My all-time favorite Web site is 1stdibs.com; it's an amazing source for antique lighting and furniture at various prices. I'm a big fan of having more than one lighting option; in my own living room I have wall sconces and a table lamp. I like to be able to control the lighting. That way you can change the entire mood of the room with the flip of a switch.

Q: What's a good way to hide stuff that accumulates around the house?

A: For storage, I like to use a lot of natural and woven items, like baskets. They work anywhere for everything — whether it's to store oversize platters in the kitchen or blankets in the bedroom.

This 19"-by-12" straw basket is deep enough to hold blankets. The Conran Shop, $48, conranusa.com

Katherine Heigl shops at Between the Sheets for her and hubby Josh Kelley's four-bedroom home in LA's Los Feliz section.

Q: I'd like to freshen up my bedroom, but I don't have a lot to spend. Any suggestions?

A: New linens are a surefire way to spruce up a bedroom, whether it's with a crisp set of sheets, a printed duvet or a plush throw. Another quick and inexpensive way to change a tired room is to flank the bed with matching tables and cover them with beautiful fabric or slipcovers, which is very popular in Europe. Or try removing your present headboard and replacing it with one that's upholstered. I love styles from Ballard Designs.

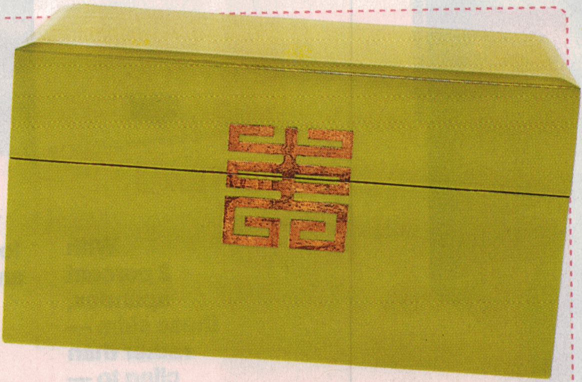
Pier 1 Imports, $34 each, pier1.com

Q: What are the hot new trends in home decor this season?

A: I tend to shy away from trends because I don't think they should dictate how you decorate your home. But lately, what I've been finding interesting is the use of materials like:

- Snakeskin It's unexpected when it pops up on a frame or a pillow.
- Brass This metal is showing up everywhere — lamps, trays, even flatware.
- Enamel It looks cool on anything from trinket boxes to end tables.



This super-glossy 12½"-by-7"-by-6½" enamel trinket box holds all our jewelry. Z Gallerie, $50, zgallerie.com

Q: My apartment is tiny. Does each room have to echo the same decorating style, or can I change it up from room to room?

A: The truth is that something should unify each room. It doesn't all have to be the same color or style, but if you have a Moroccan-inspired bedroom and a modern living room, scattering a few beaded pillows in the living room will tie together the two looks.

How to keep a tote organized

Melissa Picheny, founder of Declutter + Design, shares her top three tips.

1 CREATE STRUCTURE

Want the casual feel of a tote but miss the compartments of a purse? Create custom sections with inserts (available at purseket.com). Fold-up organizers or pouches are great for storing everything from glasses to gadgets.

2 PARE DOWN

Declutter with items that serve triple duty! Carry a universal charger that works with an iPod, a phone and a camera; tote a multipurpose cosmetics case to store makeup in or to use as an extra compartment or as a clutch!

3 PLAN AHEAD

Get ready the night before. Discard old notes and wrappers. Place papers in folders so they don't get crushed. Look for styles with labels, tabs and Velcro or tie closures to ensure nothing falls out and gets lost.

MANDY'S BIRTHDAY: APRIL 10, 1984

ARIES
MARCH 20 – APRIL 19

KILL 'EM WITH KINDNESS!

Kick your compassion into overdrive this week. Play the role of empathetic supporter rather than sympathetic observer with a friend who's down. You (and birthday girl Mandy Moore) are so honest, others know they'll always get the whole truth and nothing but from you.

TAURUS
APRIL 20 – MAY 20

Wrapping up unfinished business feels great. A sticky situation comes closer to a resolution this week, so pat yourself on the back for being so patient. Like fellow Taurus Rosario Dawson, you remain the essence of cool.

GEMINI
MAY 21 – JUNE 20

Great expectations have you bursting at the seams! You're giddy with anticipation about an upcoming work event or party. Curb your enthusiasm — and avoid getting on others' nerves — with a distracting activity.

CANCER
JUNE 21 – JULY 22

Get ready for your lucky break. Update your résumé and dust off your power suit — you're about to land the interview you've been wishing for. More money and prestige are within reach!

LEO
JULY 23 – AUG. 22

Persistence pays off big now, Leo. Hours of hard work and diligence are about to earn you fabulous rewards. Just continue to focus on your goal — there's a lot at stake! You (and sign mate Charlize Theron) know what needs to be done.

VIRGO
AUG. 23 – SEPT. 22

Embrace your independence. Don't let a difference of opinion with a colleague stop you from reaching your career goals. A future full of happiness and fulfillment awaits you!

LIBRA
SEPT. 23 – OCT. 23

Cement your relationship. Prove your loyalty to the one you love by making a bold, unexpected move. This week requires plenty of commitment from you and fellow Libra Ashlee Simpson. Don't worry — you're more than up for the challenge!

SCORPIO
OCT. 24 – NOV. 22

Ambition consumes you — and rightly so! You're about to conquer the competition and make your dreams happen. You're on a mission, so don't let anything — or anyone — stop you.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV. 23 – DEC. 20

You're completely swamped at work this week, busy bee. The bright side of the situation? You're accomplishing lots of things in record time! After fulfilling all your obligations, consider booking a flight to your favorite tropical getaway — you deserve the down time.

CAPRICORN
DEC. 21 – JAN. 19

Everyone comes to you for expert advice and personal guidance, so help out — just don't allow others' drama to interfere with your important work. With a new project waiting in the wings, you can't afford even a single delay. Make an executive decision to put yourself first.

AQUARIUS
JAN. 20 – FEB. 18

Listen to your intuition, Aquarius; it's working overtime, giving you advance notice about a new, earth-shattering love connection. This one could result in a lifelong match, so don't just acknowledge those subtle but persistent messages — be sure to obey them big time!

PISCES
FEB. 19 – MARCH 19

It's time to pursue a promising financial venture. Don't be intimidated by confusing terms or people who seem more experienced than you. Ask questions and get advice from those you trust; they have your back. You (and fellow Pisces Cindy Crawford) are about to hit the jackpot!

SUDOKU

HOW TO PLAY:

It's as easy as 1, 2, 3! Don't be afraid of the numbers — math skills have nothing to do with it! Sudoku consists of a large grid separated into nine 3-by-3 minigrids. To complete the puzzle, fill in the missing numbers. Every minigrid and every row (horizontal and vertical) must contain the numbers 1 through 9, without any repeats. The numbers can appear in any order. Don't get frustrated! It may take a little while to figure out the technique that works best for you. And use a pencil — you'll definitely need the eraser!

Leatherheads

Clooney scores with his new romantic comedy

In 1925, pro football was a dying industry. Trying to boost business, aging player Dodge Connelly (George Clooney, who also directed) recruits a war hero and college-football star (The Office's John Krasinski) to his team. Oops: Turns out the new guy's being investigated by a tough reporter (Renée Zellweger) — whom both men fall for. Modeled after the Katharine Hepburn–Cary Grant screwball comedies of the 1930s, everything about this likable comedy screams, "We're old-timey!" a little too loudly. But the sharp writing and engaging cast help carry it into the end zone. ★★★☆

Shine a Light

You won't get no satisfaction

Didn't know there was a new Martin Scorsese movie out? No wonder: Oddly enough, the director's latest brings a 2006 Rolling Stones benefit concert to the screen. Guest stars pop up, from Bill Clinton to Christina Aguilera. But in the end, this is still just a concert film, which means fans will love it while those who think the Stones should have retired, say, 30 years ago will be bored. ★★½☆

My Blueberry Nights

A strong cast can't save sleepy Nights

Trying to forget her cheating boyfriend, a young woman (singer Norah Jones, in her movie debut) embarks on a journey to find herself, bonding with a café owner (Jude Law) in NYC, an alcoholic cop in Memphis and a free-spirited gambler (Natalie Portman) in Nevada. Despite captivating moments, it's rambling, slow and all a little precious, and Jones is too blank to be the center of a movie. ★★☆☆

Sex and Death 101

A shallow and sleazy comedy

Roderick Blank (Simon Baker) seems ready to settle down until he receives a mysterious e-mail listing every woman he's slept with — and 72 future conquests. While he begins working his way down the list, a femme fatale (Winona Ryder) is seducing guys and leaving them in comas. Sparks fly when these subplots collide, but it's tough to endure this unfunny, misogynistic flick until then. ★★☆☆

Samantha Who?

This unforgettable comedy returns with laughs

Samantha (Christina Applegate) may be suffering from amnesia, but in this episode (the first after a four-month hiatus) she learns she can't forget the ex she loves — especially when she's forced to move back into her apartment with him and his new gal. Christina's comedic timing makes her (once deceitful, now charming) character delightful to watch. —B.K.S. Mon., April 7, 9:30 p.m., ABC ★★★☆

¡Viva Hollywood!

This latest reality series is a true soap opera

The search for the next hot Latin soap star begins on ¡Viva Hollywood!, a new reality series that places 12 jaw-droppingly gorgeous wannabe actors under one roof as they vie for a $100,000 prize and a role on a telenovela. In a truly campy twist, each week someone is eliminated in a death scene! It's as melodramatic as, well, a telenovela. —M.M. Sun., April 13, 10:30 p.m., VH1 ★★★☆

American Idol: Idol Gives Back

Yet another reason to idolize this show

Get ready to pledge! The second-annual fund-raising event returns to benefit the Children's Defense Fund and other charities. This year, Mariah Carey, Brad Pitt and former Idol Carrie Underwood help headline the star-studded evening. Wed., April 9, 7:30 p.m., Fox
